(57) Abstract: An aid for undertaking a routine checking procedure including means to step through such a routine, adapted to provide an output to a checker to remind the checker of the routine step required to be performed in a preset order, with activator means being operated to move to the next step when the result of the routine step is normal. The aid further includes a means to request an emergency routine check at any time through the routine checking procedure, this emergency routine check being in general the emergency steps of checking required at the corresponding routine step at which the checking is at the time of the emergency routine check. The means to request an emergency routine check may be provided by a first manually accessible member and the means to step through the routine is provided by a second manually accessible member, the two members being adjacent.
